

Youth Addictions Stabilization Unit (YASU)

YASU provides a safe, short-term environment for youth aged 12–17 experiencing severe and persistent substance use. The program offers both voluntary and involuntary stabilization under the Youth Drug Stabilization Act. It focuses on medically supervised detox, physical stabilization, and educational support regarding mental health and addiction. Staff work closely with families to navigate the continuum of care, providing essential crisis intervention and helping youth explore long-term treatment options once they are no longer under acute influence.

Mikaaming Mino Pimatiziwin Healing Lodge

Located in Sagkeeng First Nation, this lodge offers a unique seven-week residential treatment program specifically for First Nation and Inuit families. The program utilizes a holistic, traditional approach to healing from drug and alcohol addiction. It integrates the Seven Sacred Teachings (Respect, Truth, Love, Honesty, Wisdom, Humility, and Courage) into the recovery process. The facility includes family suites and an on-site classroom, ensuring that healing happens within a cultural context while supporting the entire family unit together.

COMPASS Youth Rehabilitation and Recovery Inpatient Treatment Service

COMPASS is a voluntary, 14-bed residential program for youth aged 13–17 who have struggled to find success with community-based resources. Located near Portage la Prairie, it provides a safe, drug-free environment focused on psychosocial rehabilitation. The multi-disciplinary team includes nurses, counsellors, and youth care workers who facilitate individual and group therapy. The program emphasizes healthy living through recreational activities, fitness, and life-skills building, helping youth develop the strategies necessary for long-term recovery and community reintegration.

Manitoba Adolescent Treatment Centre (MATC)

MATC provides a comprehensive range of mental health and addiction services for Manitoba youth. They operate the Youth Addictions Centralized Intake, acting as the primary gateway for families navigating provincial support systems. Their services range from brief community-based interventions to intensive hospital-based inpatient treatment. MATC focuses on psychiatric and emotional disorders often co-occurring with substance use, offering evidence-based care through a multi-disciplinary team to support the stabilization and long-term mental wellness of adolescents and their families.
